Presented by Peter R. Coons, Sr. Vice President and Co-Founder of D4, and Kris Wasserman, Vice President & Senior Consultant

Corporations continue to store data unnecessarily and its growth is unabated. While seemingly harmless, this data may be subject to preservation due to litigation or regulatory investigations. The cost of finding, collecting and reviewing this data can run into the millions on even a small matter. The price of not doing the aforementioned steps properly can cost an organization even more. This presentation will address the various phases of electronic discovery and provide technical advice regarding the identification and reduction of data prior to its review and production. Further, this presentation will address newer data repositories being sought by litigants, such as cloud data and smart devices. Advice will be provided on how to identify data stored in these repositories and steps one can take to preserve it.

Eliminate Headaches From Improper Service of Process (2:00PM-3:00PM)

Presented by Brani Adreev, MBA

Do you know that according to the National Center for State Courts, process service is one of the top challenges confronting the Justice system? Consistent with fundamental notions of due process and fairness, a person must receive proper notice of any judicial action in which he/she is made a party. Yet service of process is often a neglected step in a legal proceeding. Proper service on a party and a correct affidavit of service filed with the court ensure that the parties to the action have been notified as prescribed by the law. Failure to complete this process may result in a delay, breach of duty, or termination of an otherwise successful trial. Legal market analysis conducted by Associated Services shows that more than 85% of paralegals and legal managers are not satisfied with their current process server.
